MONCLER + RICK OWENS FALL/WINTER 2026
Moncler and Rick Owens present their latest collection, fronted by cult screen legend Joe Dallesandro

Milan, November 25, 2026 – For a new winter season, the singular, subversive vision of Rick Owens' aesthetic universe intertwines with Moncler's storied outdoor codes of protection, functionality, and elevated warmth. Rooted in a shared journey of mutual influence, the collection explores the distinctive codes of both brands.

Outerwear takes center stage in a curated lineup of quilted designs spanning a range of silhouettes. Signature details run throughout the collection, including graphic Geo Quilting, metal studs, oversized utility Tour pockets, and a large Mega Strap that allows jackets to be carried with ease. The designs are presented in a refined and essential palette of black, metallic Palladium, Cloud Grey, and subtle Grease. Head-to-toe layers invite experimentation and artful styling, with the Thyra sunglasses and Trailgrip Pentalace ankle boots completing the season's ensembles.

The accompanying global campaign, photographed by Rick Owens himself, stars pioneering screen legend Joe Dallesandro, a muse of underground cinema and the New York art scene.

"Little Joe mythologized an indifferent beauty in Lou Reed's hymn to queer subculture. 'Take a Walk on the Wild Side' was a turning point for me and a lot of other suppressed kids of my generation. his inclusion in Avedon's photos of Warhol's entourage illustrated the magic of finding one's tribe, for better or worse." – Rick Owens

Dallesandro is known for his seminal collaborations with creative luminaries including Andy Warhol, Richard Avedon, Paul Morrissey, Serge Gainsbourg, Francis Ford Coppola, and John Waters, who once said that Joe had "forever changed male sexuality in the cinema." As the most prominent of the "Warhol Superstars," Dallesandro challenged conventional representations of male sexuality, becoming one of the first male film actors to be widely celebrated as an openly sexualized, nude sex symbol among both gay and straight audiences.

Rick Owens selected Dallesandro to star in the campaign for the launch of the Moncler + Rick Owens collection. Photographed in black and white, Dallesandro wears voluminous silhouettes from the collection. As always, the muse embodies the designer's singular vision, shaped by a longstanding fascination with the compelling worlds of subculture.
