UNVEILS TIMELESS ELEGANCE IN THE ETERNAL CITY

*A new chapter unfolds in Rome, in a cinematic campaign starring Italian actors
Celeste Dalla Porta and Francesco Scianna*

Rome, March 2, 2026 — Moncler Collection unveils a new chapter in the Eternal City, following memorable moments in London, New York, Paris, and Madrid. For Spring 2026, the collection refines lightweight layering through elevated materials, tactile contrasts, and purposeful design – where function meets quiet sophistication. Rooted in a timeless palette and conceived for life in motion, it expresses a confident metropolitan elegance, brought to life through the magnetic presence of Celeste Dalla Porta and Francesco Scianna, and infused with the cinematic spirit of Rome itself.

“I find the collection truly stunning. Very versatile and effortless; impeccably elegant and original. Much like the city of Rome that served as its backdrop, it combines modernity with a timeless identity – both elegant and everyday, both casual and refined – with a very natural balance.”— Celeste Dalla Porta

“I find the collection casual, elegant, and sexy! I loved wearing the combinations with what I would call “deconstructed” shirts, paired with a sleeveless down jacket. I also loved them for the surprise they brought me: seeing how a beautifully crafted garment, once worn, truly seems to belong to you.”— Francesco Scianna

Rome, a city of timeless culture and extraordinary cinematic legacy, has long served as both muse and stage for some of cinema’s most enduring works, such as Fellini’s La Dolce Vita and Roman Holiday. Steeped in history yet alive with creative energy, it is a natural setting for Celeste and Francesco. The campaign captures the pair with effortless familiarity as they move through the streets of a city close to their hearts, in a scenic reportage of a weekend spent immersed in Rome’s renowned artful atmosphere.

A celebrated presence across film and television, Francesco is known for roles in Baaria (2009), Angel of Evil (2010), and the 2016 remake of Ben-Hur. Rising star Celeste garnered critical acclaim for her recent lead performance in Paolo Sorrentino’s Parthenope (2024).

Previous Moncler Collection campaigns featured Brooklyn and Nicola Peltz Beckham in London; Arnaud Binard and his daughter, Maya Rose, in Paris; Penn Badgley in New York; and Joaquin Furriel in Madrid.

THE COLLECTION

For men, the collection continues to explore casual sophistication through lightweight layers that define a polished metropolitan wardrobe. Elevated details such as smooth leather trim on pockets and zippers lend a quiet elegance to each piece. Standout styles include a reversible premium shearling jacket with quilted nylon sleeves, delivering a signature Moncler finish. Coordinating jackets and vests enhance the refined layered edit, while technical alternatives offer protection during spring showers. Subtle references to the sporting world appear in striped jersey-style tops and relaxed polos. The palette remains classic and concise, spanning light neutrals, navy, brown, and black. Functionality is integral, with 3-in-1 jacket designs, considered pocket placement, and sophisticated fabrics reinforced for city wear.

Womenswear introduces sophisticated ease for everyday dressing, with casual pieces elevated through refined materials and considered accents. A new quilting technique appears in a distinctive crocodile-like pattern, while other quilted styles play with volume to create softer, more feminine silhouettes, all kept deliberately lightweight. Soft leather blousons, featherlight silky nylon parkas, and lightly padded nylon puffers bring outerwear to a new level of elegance. The color palette supports versatile layering in black, beige, and cream, complemented by accents of lilac and sky blue. Tactile textures such as cashmere, leather, and bouclé meet breezy, breathable fabrics including poplin, resulting in a complete, lightweight wardrobe designed for the spring season.
